THE CHOUTEAU SALVAGE CASE. Judge Pardee, in deciding the case of the Protector against the Charles P. Chouteau, Saturday, made the following points: "The bell of the Choutean was rung three times for a landing, and was not rung for assistance. The fact is the Protector's captain, hearing of the fire, and hearing a bell rung, ran his boat alongside the Chouteau and a City of Greenville—115 sacks cotton-seed.

Rene Macready brought out of St. Francis authorities, libellants have no claim for sal vage against the Chouteau. Nor do I think that under the general facts in the case libel-lants are entitled to any allowance for labor iver 86 bales cotton, 29 sacks cotton-seed, 19,500 feet walnut lumber, 108 pkgs mdse.

Ste. Genevieve—1167 brls flour, 35 casks sacon, 715 pkgs lard, 3615 sacks corn, 15 and expenses in going to the assistance of the Chouteau. It was in the port of New Orleans. The Protector's sole business is as a salvage boat. She is owned and run by an incorporation of insurance company presidents for harbor protection." The crew are under pay for such service, with a contract waiving salvage. The boat had steam up, ready to go to any point. The boat is of iron, and neither she nor her crew ran any risk or danger. Besides, in trying to aid the Chon-teau, against the will of her master, the captain and crew of the Protector were viole and aggressive, and apparently disposed lay the ound ation for a salvage claim."

THE FOREST ROSE. The annexed letter from Colonel F. A Montgomery settles a little dispute as to the stroyed: BOSEDALE, BOLIVAE Co., MISS., June 22, 1881. River Reporter of the Appeal: As requested, I give my recollection of the explosion of the steamer Forest Rose in 1857. I do not remember the nonth, but it was late in the summer or in the fall of that year that I had occasion to go to our Courthouse, which was then situated on the plantation of Judge McGuire, immediately opposite the town of Napoleon. I had finished my business and mounted my horse to go home, some ten miles below or the river, but had stopped a few moments to assed down Sunday night for New Orleans. wait for a friend in the road, which at that point was within a few feet of the bank of the river. Opposite to me was the town on Napoleon, then a flourishing place with per -day for St. Louis as an Anchor-line boat. haps eight hundred or a thousand inhab Jim Morris, late mate of the Idlewild, has esumed his old stand-by, ship-carpentering.

The Level H. Rieley and byrges, from Below, about two miles, was Island 75, or, as main channel of the river was then we of the island. About half way tween the island and the town was niddle of the river under full headway f steam. I had turned my horse's head the direction of the steamer and was idly looking at her when suddenly the whole boat was enveloped in steam and hidden from my view. A few minutes later, and be-Louis, passed down yesterday evening for New Orleans. fore the steam had disappeared, I heard a report like the explosion of a cannon, and simultaneously a wild, despairing scream, which I can never forget. The river was which I can never lorget. The river was very low and a sandbar extended out toward the boat, and I galloped at once to a point opposite the boat, which had began to drift slowly down. The river was covered with were persons sitting or clinging. Upon one plank, I remember, was a large dog. The boat was a complete wreck. The pilothouse had fallen down to the lower deck, and I saw only one man standing on that part of the cabin which had not fallen in. I saw smoke ould, which passed down Sunday, got off issuing from some of the debris around the furnace, and to him I called that the boat was taking fire, and he got a bucket and extinguished the fire. A little later many skiffs and a steamboat, the name of which I do not remember, were on the spot, and reserved the recreams floating. The boat and rescued the persons floating. The boat took the Forest Rose in tow and landed her pposite on the Arkansas side. How long came of her, I do not now remember. The rty, the wounded being taken to the Ma ine Hospital at Napoleon, where many them died. The cause, or supposed cause, of the explosion, if I have ever heard it, I have torgotten.
